

To Whom It May Concern:

Regarding the proposal of Low Power FM (LPFM), I would like to issue my comments.

I and my family currently are impacted in very positive ways by listening to a current FM station that uses translator stations. We listen to K-LOVE that is found locally on 91.1FM. We, and many of our friends and family members, benefit in the following ways:

1. We are kept informed of local events and issues. By broadcasting local area news and events and items, we are very well-served in a locally relevant manner. It is obvious from their messages and thier format that they are concerned about making a positive impact on the local community.
2. If K-LOVE were displaced by other (potentially various) LPFM broadcasters, it would be a net negative effect. In addition to news and events, we use K-LOVE as a source of consistent, FAMILY-FRIENDLY entertainment and music. We drive, for our jobs and events, all over the Denver Metro area and the Front Range of Colorado. It would be very disruptive, literally, to have the signal change from station to station depending on the local location as opposed to having 1 consistently strong signal broadcasting un-offensive, healthy items.
3. K-LOVE is in the public interest because of many reasons. It, by the very nature of its content and format, and strong, consistent signal, are very much in the public interest. There are many niche-oriented radio stations. There is the hard-rock station, the modern-rock station, the classical-music station, the mix-music, station, the country-music station, the rap/r&b station, etc. These are all great and part of the free-market of access and ideas that exists in our culture, society, market, and airwave structure. K-LOVE fills a unique--and quite large--niche of family-oriented music. Families really can tune in and never worry about what the young kids will be exposed to in terms of adverstisements, dj's comments, or song lyrics. It is the one "safe" station for families to listen to. The fact that it can use translators ensures that there is a strong consistent signal from area to area. It is not confined to one area or neighborhood. By promoting the sense of community that it does, by promoting family-stability that it does, by being positive and encouraging which it does, K-LOVE is arguably one of the few broadcast stations that truly has the public interest in mind and as a specified goal.

Thank you very much for time, efforts, and consideration in this matter.

Very Sincerely,
